PREFACE

The Allhands descendants are greatly indebted to James L. Allhands for compiling this very authoritative genealogy of the Allhands Family Tree. He spent many hours in the ten years of his research hoping to trace our lineage back to the Old Country, but was unable to accomplish this due to many different spellings of the name. He personally did research in Germany and Philadelphia, in the Archives in Washington, D.C. and employed researchers in Richmond, Virginia and Frankfort, Kentucky, plus writing many letters to relatives, searching the records in County Court houses and libraries and visiting old cemeteries.

Because of childhood memory of my father's Holland Dutch Family Bible, my father-in-law, Frank D. Allhands kept alive a spark of interest to solve the mystery of where in Germany the Holland ancestors lived. James L. Allhands came along and developed this spark into a burning flame to produce this noble treasure "The House of Allhands".

PREFACE

The Allhands descendants are greatly indebted to James L. Allhands for compiling this very authentic genealogy of the Allhands Family Tree. He spent many, many hours in the ten years of his research hoping to trace our lineage back to the Old Country, but was unable to accomplish this due to the many different spellings of the name. Because of the childhood memory of a German or Holland Dutch Family Bible, my father, the late Dr. Frank D. DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL ALLHANDS

Also a Few of John and George Allhands
Daniel's Brothers

It is regrettable that I did not become interested in looking up our ancestral background during the lifetime of my grandfather, William J. Allhands, but as a matter of fact I never thought much about our family name, except for occasional jokes, until the late Dr. F. D. Allhands and daughter, Vashti, called at my office in Dallas in 1942.

He informed me that we had sprung from the families of three immigrant brothers from Holland, (though some are equally sure they were German immigrants) and then came the big surprise. He stated that the name was originally Alhance, and not Allhands. Among his childhood memories he recalled an old Dutch Bible that served as a record of family births, marriages and deaths and that the name therein was Alhance.

A growing curiosity gave me an urge to trace back among the distant roots of our family tree and fortunately, I had preserved in my scrap book a clipping from the Watseka, Illinois newspaper of March 13, 1908, giving a biographical sketch of my grandfather, Wm. J. Allhands, as follows:

Wm. J. ALLHANDS IS NO MORE Octogenarian and Resident of Iroquois County Fifty-four Years

Death came quickly last Friday evening to Wm. J. Allhands, one of the venerable residents of Watseka. His health the past winter had been enfeebled by his advancing years but he was able to be about daily, see to his affairs and take a keen interest in what was going on about him. For a week or more he had been rather declining but was up and around and Friday night indulged in a hearty supper. After partaking he arose and spent some moments looking out the door. He was seen to waver and was assisted to a chair. Hardly a flutter of the pulse was to be detected, the summons had come and the brittle thread of life was severed.

William James Allhands was born in Butler County, Ohio, Dec. 22, 1821. His father, Daniel Allhands, was a native of Virginia emigrating in an early day to Kentucky, where he married Patience Saddler. The family later moved to Ohio and in 1833 they took up their residence in Indiana. Among scenes and hardships of pioneer days they cleared a farm from out the forest wilderness. Eleven children were born to this union, of whom William J. is the last to pass away.

Mr. Allhands received the common school education obtainable in those early days and at the age of 19 commenced farming for himself in Montgomery County, Indiana. He was united in marriage Oct. 21, 1841, to Katherine Ann Hixson, who died in 1848. To them were born four children, one dying in infancy. Erastus J., Seth and Catherine, who married Issac Peddycoart, are also deceased.

September 13, 1849, Mr. Allhands married Martha Moore, who departed this life June 12, 1901. Eleven children were born, six of whom, three sons and three daughters, survive the father. There are 26 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

In 1852 the deceased came to Illinois and returned the following year to Indiana. In 1854 he moved to this state and has since resided here. He followed farming in Belmont township until his removal to Watseka eleven years ago. By thrift and economy he later possessed of a competency which permitted him to spend later years in retirement, thus enjoying the rewards of his labor and industry. Since the death of his wife he has maintained his home and for some years past his daughter, Mrs. Mina Sayler and family have made their residence with him and his needs were given every consideration.

In Politics Mr. Allhands affiliated with the Democratic party, casting his first ballot for James K. Polk. His religious preferences were with the United Brethren and he was ever a loyal follower in the service of the Master.

The life of Mr. Allhands was not marked by unusual events. His career was useful and he lived respected by all, passing away with a measure of respect commensurate with the life of honor and uprightness he long lived.

The funeral took place at the Friends Church on Sunday at 11:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Willis Bond of Danville, Ind., a warm personal friend of Mr. Allhands. Burial was had at Belmont Cemetery.

The surviving children present were Jacob, of Sheldon township; Mrs. Geo. Bradrick, of Donovan. John S., George M., and Mrs Mina Sayler, of Watseka. Mrs. Blanche Rush residing at Corona, Calif., was, owing to the great distance, unable to be here. Other relatives in attendance were: Wm. Williamson, Peoria; Arthur Allhands, Kankakee; Frank Allhands, Villa Grove; and Ernest Hatton of Monticello, Ind.

The above obituary gave me a lead, for it stated that our great-grandfather had migrated from Virginia to Kentucky and there married Patience Saddler; so in June, 1951, my wife and I drove to Frankfort, Kentucky, where Mrs. Chas. N. Hobson was employed to search the records of the Kentucky Historical Society. Briefly her findings were.

The Jefferson County, Kentucky Marriage Abstracts, page 46, Book 1, page 43, records that Daniel "Allhance" and Patience Saddler (Of Maryland) were married January 5, 1803, with Hugh Morrison as the bondsman. Also those same records reveal that Eliza "Allhance," (Evidently Daniel's sister), was married to Henry Dresser, September 27, 1802, but here the spelling of her name is shown as "Allhance." The same book of records in Frankfort lists George "Alhands" as being married to Ann Staten Baker on February 11, 1804, and another place in the Kentucky Land Grants — Jillson, Page 262, George "Alhans," is issued a land Patent. The extra "l" and "ds" appear to be additions that were added along the way, indicating that there was no standard form for the spelling of our name back in the early 18th century.

In the hope of tracing my ancestry back through the centuries to the landing of our forefathers on these shores, I delved through the records at Germantown, Pennsylvania, and put researchers to work in Washington D.C. and Richmond, Virginia. Dr. F D. Allhands. Mrs. Vashti Nannet, of Crawfordsville; Roy B. Allhands. of Arkadelphia, Arkansas; Mrs. Dolores G. Runbeck, of Chicago, Illinois; Mrs. Helen Beckstead, of Phoenix, Arizona; Mrs Arah Mowrer, of Monticello, Indiana; and Mrs. Vena Christy of Royal Center, Indiana. were keenly interested and helpful in tracing our family tree.

However, while we never succeeded in pin-pointing our pioneer forebearer's arrival on these shores, a task made more difficult on account of the various spellings, we did come to the firm conclusion that there have been two and possibly three generations of brothers by name of John, George and Daniel since arrival of our first colonists in the New World. We also found that many had identical first names, and that many of these sons and daughters of the soil also turned their hands to doctoring, teaching, preaching and politicing.

In Volume 1, page 42 of Publication of the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Runbeck found where Joseph Allhance was the owner of 140 acres of land in the Franconia District of Philadelphia County in 1734. Also, that Pennsylvania Archives Sixth Section, Volume 3, Page 877 lists Jacob Allhans as a substitute for a commissioned officer. It was found, too, that the National Genealogy Quarterly, volume 4, page 10, reports a George Allhance as having been given the Oath of Allegiance and Fidelity to the state of Virginia, March 2, 1778. The court records of Ohio County, Virginia. (now Ohio County, West Virginia) for April 1778 reveal that letters of administration were granted to Margaret Allhance on the estate of George Allhance. Also found in the Pennsylvania census for 1790 Jacob "Allshans", Northhampton Co. Pa. in 1784; John "Althans", Montgomery County, Pa. 1790, page 163; John "Althons", Bedford Co., Pa. page 24.

JOHN ALLHANDS

In so far as we have been able to determine from our research efforts, the John Allhands story began on June 14, 1792, when John Althance pledged vows with Cathy Venereck in a ceremony performed by Rev. John Strange, a Lutheran minister, as reported in Annals of Southwest Virginia 1769-1800, page 1375. and in Virginia Marriage Bonds 1700-1800, page 122.

This Althance family evidently broke loose from its moorings in Virginia and set out for the west in a prairie schooner, as John Alhance is found on the 1797 Jefferson County Kentucky tax list for the first time.

He also appears on lists for succeeding years up to and including the tax roll for August 4, 1805. And Kentucky's second census for this county in 1800 lists Daniel, George, Jacob and John Alhance.

Clark County, Indiana was mostly empty acres in 1805, for an election of that year brought out but 46 votes. However, in those days of rough pioneering, settlers were slowly coming in, and sometime after mid-1805 the John Alhance family crossed the Ohio river to be numbered among its newcomers. They hewed a home out of forest trees with their own hands. They cleared, they rolled logs and they burned brush, for that was a land clothed in mature forests of many woods such as tall yellow poplar, sugar maple, white oak, beech, hickory, sweet gum and walnut, etc., where paths had to be blazed from one neighbor's cabin to another. There was such an abundance of game and wild fowl that for the next two years John Alhance made a living by prowling the silent trails hunting, fishing and trapping.

They did not travel in those days because there was no easy way to get from one place to another. Mills were scarce, and going to mill was one of the great events of the year, and as John Alhance started planting things he occasionally toiled his way back across the Ohio River which separated Clark County, Indiana and Jefferson County, Kentucky, to a tiny grist mill on the Kentucky side. There his bread corn trickled slowly on to revolving stones for turning into corn meal, at the rate of one peck per hour. John Allhands was a Corporal in the War of 1812 from October 21 to December 7 for which he received $9.89.

On December 6, 1814, John became a Clark County land owner by acquiring 100 acres (for $250.00) out of the original 103 grant to George Rogers Clark. John and Catherine both made X for signature. John Allhands died in August 1843, Clark County, Indiana.

John's wife Catherine lived to be 90 years old and died with cancer of the face at the home of her son George Sr. who cared for her.

The early Allhands always produced a liberal number of children, and they came along in the John Allhands' home at two year intervals until they totaled a round dozen, as follows:

1. Catherine Allhands
Married: Dan Stutzman, 1817
2. Polly Allhands

According to historian Otto W. Ferguson's articles which appeared in the Indianapolis Star of April 3rd and 4th, 1929, the territory of Indiana became a going concern on July 4th. 1800, with William Henry Harrison as Governor. It embraced all of the present state of Indiana and Illinois and parts of Michigan and Wisconsin.

From the very start the question of slavery was a bone of contention, and by fall of 1806, when Governor Harrison called an election for the following February 4th, to select members to the second General Assembly, the settlers lined up pro and anti-slavery. (Nearly all of the latter were men who went straight to the soil, who evidently had vision and hope of a new type of farm life—they and their children tilling the soil without slaves, hence the name of Freesoiler.) That election was held in the log courthouse, of a pioneer settlement known as Springville, two miles west of Charlestown. For the first time in any section of the great Northwest territory west of the Ohio state line, the anti-slavery sentiment had the votes by a scant majority. The certified polling sheet of the “keepers” of that election lists John Allhands as the fifteenth name in the Freesoilers or anti-slavery column.

The doings of the John Allhands family became so woven into the history of Clark County, Indiana, that today we find a street in Sellersburg, officially bearing the name of “Allhands Avenue,” same being named in honor of Clifford Allhands, a politically prominent descendant of John, and who owned the United House Furnishing Company there. He was one of the sons of William Allhands, who stemmed from George Allhands Sr., son of John Allhands. William also fathered three daughters—Elizabeth, Helen and Frances.

From here we trace the branches out from John and Catherine Allhands’ third child:

GEORGE ALLHANDS, SR.

Born: December 10, 1798, in Jefferson County, Kentucky

He made his first trip before a home altar, in Clark County, Indiana with Mary Hatton on February 4, 1827. Mary Hatton died giving birth to twin babies who also died. After her death he pledged vows with Ellen Hatton Robinette (a widow, and sister of Mary Hatton) on March 10, 1842, in Clark County, Indiana.

George, Sr. died in 1834.

Dr. F. D. Allhands remembered that Bible reading was a daily habit of his industrious and sincerely spiritual pioneer grandfather George, and of how prayers went up both morning and evening. When one of his hired hands objected to taking time out for this daily ritual because he did not see the need of it, with firm lips grandfather George said "There'll be no wheat threshing this day until after morning prayer." So Divine blessings were invoked before going afield.

A spring of brackish water pouring over the rocks about six miles from the clay-chinked cabin home of grandfather George Allhands was known as "the lick," for it attracted animals from far and near, some even swimming the river for their salt. When that brine was evaporated by those settlers a pinch of salt was left behind in the form of crystals.

According to Dr. F. D. Allhands, in 1852 his grandfather George and neighbors built a flatboat for transporting a cargo of produce down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans. Setting out from the landing known as Bull Creek, at times their clumsy boat, drifting with the current, made four and five miles an hour, and in about forty days reached journey's end. After disposing of their products those hardy, adventurous Americans, set out on the long return trek, walking single file, mile by mile, and bivouacking together around many a camp fire till they reached home.

FRANK DALLAS ALLHANDS (Second child of George, Jr. and Sara Allhands)

Born: November 23, 1869, Clark County, Indiana

Miss Georgia Goodwin charmed his heart and they were married in Clark County, Indiana, October 8, 1901

Frank died: January 7, 1953 (on Route 6 Crawfordsville, Indiana.)

Doctoring had been in the family blood of Frank Dallas Allhands—his uncle David and a cousin or two were doctors, and he had been fascinated with medicine from boyhood. But during his early years times were difficult and even necessities of life were hard to come by. He went to work very early and his education was most sparing. However, he eventually managed by teaching school for $1.50 per day to satisfy a fierce ambition of graduating in 1897 from the Kentucky School of Medicine now known as the University of Louisville. From there he moved up into Montgomery County, where for 40 years he watched over the health of the community in and around Wingate, Indiana, and as was often the case with country doctors, his best material was babies.

Much of that time this old-fashioned horse and buggy doctor traversed all sorts of roads in any kind of weather, day or night to tend the sick and needy. He was as much taken for granted as the Wingate post office, and often the family secrets and keys to the skelton closet were entrusted to him.

He had a great passion for work. It was sort of a religion with him, and he saw to it that every member of his family were worshippers, too. He remembered the early days when he charged 50¢ at the office and $1 for a house call, yet by virtue of thrift and common sense he became the owner of several Montgomery County farms.

GEORGE ALLHANDS

As our research efforts at the Historical Society in Frankfort, Kentucky revealed, George Allhance married Ann Staten Baker, (evidently nicknamed Nancy) on February 11, 1804. She was born on the eastern shore of Maryland about 1785, and died April 15, 1849.

As per Kentucky records, George Allhans acquired by Land Patent, 100 acres in Cumberland County, on Upper Whitestone Creek on the 12th day of June, 1812. He was also the owner of three head of horses. Sometime after 1812, George sold out in Kentucky and followed his brother Daniel up into Ohio. Here each got a spot of earth for himself and their roots sank down pretty deep. A History and Biographical Cyclopaedia of Butler County Ohio numbers George and Daniel among its early settlers. In the Clerk's office of this county there are several recorded land sales made by Daniel Allhands and wife Patience, also George Alhands (sometimes spelled with one l) and his wife Nancy, and in all such transfers the wives signed by an x mark.

In those days of long ago, they covered the fire, in the open fire place, so the embers never grew cold, gleaming bright and red when the ashes were raked away. And when the time and the wood ashes lye were right, the accumulation of fats was converted into the family's soap. They made candles and spun wool and for their sweetening they became hunters of wild honey, usually from hollow trees, and in the spring drew maple sap and boiled it for syrup and sugar. The first white child buried in Riley Township of Butler County was Thomas D., the son of George and Nancy Allhands, who was scalded to death by hot sugar water in March 1830. And dreaming and planning that the county would be better when they left than when they came, George was an early day class leader, and church services were being held at their log-cabined farm as early as 1818.

Turning his face westward, George made a final move to Cass County, Indiana. Here he became a rather extensive land owner, and was well-heeled enough at time of his death, February 14, 1846, that his estate inventoried $90 worth of stock in an Ohio Bridge company. The children of that home were Thomas, Katie, William and Elizabeth.

DANIEL ALLHANDS

George Alhance must have been the last to leave Kentucky, as we find him getting a Patent on 100 acres of land in Cumberland County, Kentucky, in June 1812. The Jefferson County records from 1805 on, do not list an Alhance, so presumably the reports of how new land could be had almost for the asking, caused John to strike out across the river into Clark County, Indiana, while Daniel set out through the wilderness for still other new land over the horizon in Butler County, Ohio. Here, Daniel became a justice of the Peace, and when his family tree commenced branching out the following children came into that home: Andrew, Patsy, Thomas, George, Daniel, Elizabeth, Nancy, Katherine and William James, my grandfather.

Still restless to get ahead, Daniel, in 1831, again set his pioneer wagons rolling with the western tide, this time from Butler County, Ohio, and after many weary days he stopped and drove down stakes in what was then rugged Montgomery County, Indiana. Here, on Sept. 26, 1831, according to the records, he acquired 80 acres of land in Section 31, Township 20, range 5, by Patent from the United States government.

He started clearing and tilling, building a log cabin in his struggling corn patch. He served as constable of Coal Creek township and did a little surveying on the side. But farming was crude in those days and it was hard to plow a dollar out of that half tamed land, for when Daniel passed away on October 8, 1847, he left, according to the Probate Court's records, a very tiny estate. Land values had not risen much, and only $645 was realized from the sale of his farm. For the administrator, an auctioneer knocked-down his live stock and personal effects, such as a washboard at 25¢, salt cups 25¢, and saddle $6, all of which brought a total of $195.48. After payment of debts, including $5 to Philip Swank for making Daniel's simple wooden coffin, widow Patience received $109.38, and to each of the following children went $12.66: Andrew, Daniel (both residents of Illinois), George, William J., Nancy (wife of Michael Swank), Patsey (wife of Chancellor Livingston), Katherine (wife of Samuel Oppy), Elizabeth Bennett, deceased, leaving as heirs (Daniel, George M., John S., Nancy M., Harriette, Edward B., Alfred, all minors) and Thomas Allhands, also deceased, and leaving as heirs (William and Alfred, both minors).

On one of our trips to Indiana, Vashti Nannet piloted us over to a tiny burial ground in Vermilion County, Illinois, five miles southwest of Danville, near the Kickapoo State Park, and which is officially known as the "Allhands Cemetery." That plot had been carved out of a tract of land entered by Daniel Allhands, possibly a brother of William J. Allhands and who acquired same by Patent from the United States government on March 3, 1854. There were only a few leaning head stones in that forgotten and neglected city of the dead, among them being a marker for Sarah, wife of Daniel Allhands.

William James Allhands

My grandfather, William James Allhands, son of Daniel, was born in Butler County, Ohio, December 22, 1821. He was ten years old when his folks moved to Indiana, and at an early age turned to the farm and helped his father. After taking a wife he cleared a small tract of land in Montgomery County, Indiana. But as word of Illinios' heavy black loam spread through the settler's grapevine to Indiana, William J. Allhands began hankering to own some of that fertile soil. He had heard of how President Millard Fillmore, under an Act of Congress of September 28, 1850, known as "An Act Granting Bounty Land to Certain Officers and Soldiers who have been engaged in the Military Service of the United States," had been issuing land patents to militiamen of the war of 1812.

Grandfather wanted to see the country with his own eyes, so in 1852 he set out on a horseback journey to Illinois, returning to his Montgomery County, Indiana home the following year. At that time the state of Illinois was only 35 years old, and while its county of Iroquois was the home of less than 5,000 settlers, what grandfather had seen and heard kept haunting him, so in 1854 he became an Illinois resident for the remainder of his days. Money was scarce and down the wretched trail, ahead of the wagons containing his family and belongings were driven several head of cattle. That was prior to the coming of its first railroad and while Danville was only a frontier village of around 1,000 souls, those cattle were sold for a few precious dollars. William J. Allhands longed to have his own farm and by thrift and saving he finally commenced buying land, continuing such purchases until he eventually became the owner of 280 acres in Section 12, Township 26 N, Range 12, Belmont Township, Iroquois County, Illinois. In the early 60's some of his tract changed hands at $6.50 per acre, but ten years later prices jumped sharply, and he was paying as high as $25 per acre for some of it.

Born of humble folk, our grandparents passed along to us a great heritage. In my visions of long ago I remember grandpa William J. Allhands as one whose religious convictions were strong and of long standing. I can see his neat, white two-story farm home with shutters; its dinner bell to call the men from the fields, and the big red barn. Here there was peace, plenty and contentment— with a large corn crib chock-full of big golden ears, the old orchard with its russet, Bellflower and winesap apples. Hams were in the smokehouse, and most satisfying was the store laid by in his old-fashioned cellar. Potatoes were heaped in the bins, and new kraut was fermenting in old stone jars. Shelves were devoted to jams and jellies and jars of fruit.

Andrew was reared and married in Ohio, and in 1830, like his father Daniel, moved westward into Montgomery County, Indiana. There he purchased land, built a log cabin and farmed, remaining until 1842, when he drove overland into Vermilion County, Illinois. There he settled on a tract of timber land four miles west of the pioneer village of Danville, Illinois. His son, Francis M., took up residence in Danville in 1866, where he had a long record of honorable public service, having filled the office of county treasurer for ten years, and deputy county clerk for six years.
